DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 23 July 2003 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

> (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Williams (US 4,035,921). Williams discloses an apparatus for measuring oil level in a fuel tank or oil reservoir comprising an indicator rod [14,34,20] having a dipstick [14] at a first end and a stopper [20] at a second end; a tube [S] having a first end connected to the fuel tank or reservoir and a second end having a flange (rim, Figure 2) and an opening to receive the indicator rod (Figure 2); a locking mechanism [18] coupled to stopper and releasably engaging the flange of the tube (column 4, lines 48-56); and a seal [16] between stopper and tube which deforms to form a seal face (Figure 2). The locking mechanism is actuated by a lever (key 58) operable by a user's finger and a second portion having a locking surface [24] which selectively engages the flange (column 4, lines 48-56; Figure 2), and is coupled to the stopper by a connection operable to allow biased rotation of the locking mechanism (columns 3 and 4). The dipstick assembly may be wholly and manually removed from the tube [S] and thus comprises a handle having one end received in the tube opening and another end adapted for manipulation by a user. Williams discloses the claimed invention except the tube having a radially outward projecting flange. Gassman teaches the use of indicator rods held by a seal to a tube having a radially outward projecting flange in systems for measuring oil level in an oil reservoir or other liquid level in a container; see Figures 2 and 5 and column 1 line 24 through column 2 line 7. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use a tube having a radially outward projecting flange as taught by Gassman in the invention taught by Williams to form the connecting tube, since Gassman teaches that such a tube can be sealed to a dipstick assembly and that the shape of the tube portion can be varied while sealing in the same manner (column 2 lines 4-7). Applying the dipstick assembly of Williams to different containers which have different connecting tubes would add increased usefulness and applicability to the invention of Williams.

Response to Arguments

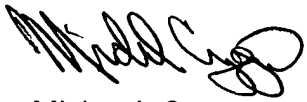

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-11 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
